The historical aspect of English really encompasses more than the three stages of development just under consideration. English has what might be called a prehistory as well. As we have seen, our language did not simply spring into existence; it was brought from the Continent by Germanic tribes who had no form of writing and hence left no records.

Products made in England: England is re-discovering its roots. The English, living on an island, have always built ships, and for many years shipbuilding was a major industry, especially in the north of England, on the Tyne.. I cannot even pretend to understand what it was like to work in a shipyard - the closest I've come was probably an oil rig.
