Ziyā Baranī's Vision of the State - Irfan Habib, 1999

The low annual growth rate of the Indian population between the years 1600 1800, pegged at 0.14%, has been denied by the IHC. Alas, it is Irfan Habib who declaims: the population during the Mughal period did not remain stable though the compound rate of growth, 0.14% per annum, was hardly spectacular and was much lower than the rate attained during the nineteenth century [The Cambridge Economic History of India, Vol.
